Mokena Road Committee Gives Excellent Report

The Mokena Development and Hard Road Improvement Association, held another rousing meeting Monday night.

The Auditorium held a capacity assembly of members and friends from adjoining towns, and all seemed to be keyed to the highest tension of enthusiasm over the road issue.

The meeting was opened by Chairman McGovney, and after the reading by Secretary Schweser and adoption of the minutes of the previous meeting, the report of the special committee appointed to visit Springfield, was received. The report was submitted in writing as follows:

Mokena, Illinois, Monday Feb. 21, 1927.

Report of the Special Committee appointed by The Mokena Development and Hard Road Improvement Association, Monday Feb. 14, 1927.

The specific propositions which impressed your Committee, were: The importance of our Mission; The Justice of our Cause; The Necessity for Immediate Action.

We made the journey to Springfield, where we met and had extended interviews with State Senator Richard Barr, State Representative John Jenco and Engineer of Designs H. E. Surman of the State Highway Department, preceding our interview with the Governor.

We were listened to with interested attention and every opportunity was given us for offering evidence of the Justice of our contention, regarding the routing of the Wolfe Road Highway.

Senator Barr, Representative Jenco, Engineer Surman and others arranged for a meeting and accompanied us to the Governor's office, where we were introduced to the Governor by Senator Barr.

We were given to understand, by Governor Small, that our interest was appreciated by the State Departments. Many questions were asked and answered, maps were brought out, on the suggestion of the Governor, and compared with those we carried, routes were traced and there was a general and enlightening discussion of facts connected with the Wolfe road routing.

The Governor, Senator Barr, Representative Jenco, Engineer Surman and others interested, gave us even more of their time than we could reasonably have expected, and only the lateness of the hour, and the fact that there were still others waiting an audience with the Governor, caused us to terminate our interview.

As a result of this interview, we bring back to this organization, the specific assurance, that the location of the routing of road 51 under the $100,000,000 Bond issue has not been decided, that the Department will go over the Wolfe road route, and that no decision will be made with regard to the final laying out of the road until all interested have had an opportunity of being heard at a public hearing to be held in Will County, under the direction of the State Highway Department, and of this we are sure the proposed connecting Highway will be constructed in accordance with the Department's judgment, based on the facts developing as to the very best, the most convenient, and the most reasonable route, taking into consideration not only the local situation, but the State wide Highway System, and that the road will be constructed this year.

There was an absolute absence in all our deliberations, of any desire on the part of any one, to indicate that anything but cold facts and figures would be entertained or considered in the final determination of the important question, and no promises were made further than those enumerated in this report, as filed, and those only in justice to the interested public, and appreciation of their right, to have the route gone over and a hearing given before definite decisions were made.

The thanks of our organization are due to Governor Small and to our local representatives in State Legislature for the courtesy extended and the respect shown their committee and their presented cause. Signed: Peter Michaelson, Chas. Erickson, Don C. Hall.

The report was received and adopted, and the committee excused. A vote of thanks was extended to the Governor and our State Representatives for the reception given the Association Committee and the Secretary was instructed to report the attitude and action of the organization to the several state officials and others so splendidly and actively interested. A vote of thanks was also given to the committee for their work.

In the construction of a Highway the following rules should be observed.

"All work should be carefully laid out as even a grade as possible. Heavy grades should be cut, when practicable, by cutting down the highest points and using the material removed to fill the lower places in the road. The sides should be carefully staked out with reference to the general direction of the road, when completed shall bear the marks of skill and good judgment in its construction.

It is often desirable to relocate in order to avoid steep grades and sharp curves and to economize in the cost of maintenance in the years

Newsy Items From Tinley Park

Mr. George Schreiber received a letter from Muehlhausen in Thuringen, Germany, announcing the death of his brother, Frederick who passed away the 11th of January at the age of 80 years. He was a veteran of the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-71.

He had held a government position in the postal service, but was retired on a pension after 35 years of service. He was ill only a few days, death being due from a wound he received in the battle of Sedan. This wound not only crippled him, to a certain extent, but caused untold suffering thru the years. He leaves four children, two sons and two daughters besides grand and great grand children, also one sister and two brothers-one in Germany and George Schreiber and Mrs. C. Goebel of Tinley Park whom he had not seen for fifty years. He was conscious to the last, calling by name his relatives and those who were so dear to him and his only regret was that he could not see the loved ones in America.

Word was received last week of the safety of Mr. John Swisher's brother, Prof. Earl Swisher, instructor of fine arts and science, at Canton China.

Altho Prof. Swisher is not in the war zone, there has been a great deal of trouble this year around Canton, especially with labor unions with communistic tendencies.

Mr. John Swisher is justly proud of his younger brother.

Prof. Swisher was graduated from the Palisade Colorado high school, winning a scholarship to the state university at Boulder. He worked his way during his four year course, and won the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity. He graduated from the university at the age of 21 years and was considering an offer from Cornell, when the Canton College asked for a contract.

Chicago Realty men created quite a little excitement around 147th st. Sunday, prospecting with negotiations to purchase all available property in the vicinity. They claim a real estate boom is a certainty with the coming of spring.

These warm sunshine days have given some people the spring cleaning fever. It is quite noticeable. Justimere Farm is being overhauled; barns painted and a general clean up under the direction of Mr. George Houston and his assistant Mr. Emil Bettenhausen. Midlothian Country Club too, is being raked and rolled getting ready for the coming golf season.

Mr. Ed. Henke and family are enjoying their newly purchased Chrysler Sedan.

Little Florida Murin entertained her wee friends in honor of her 10th birthday Feb. 22nd, bunco was played with prizes. There were refreshments too, oranges direct from Fla. Officers Keuch was taken suddenly ill Sunday morning. He is not able to be up and may not be for some time.

The Royal Neighbors had a wonderful time at their dance Saturday night. It was just a big family party, a fine spirit of sociability prevailed. There leader Mrs. Mayling was most gracious as hostess. The cakes were delicious, coffee was good and music fine. Two of the Triangle Orchestra Boys added a little pep to the dancing by playing a few pieces. Emily Wieman won the courtesy prize.

Mrs. Pearl Hendricks of Chicago spent the week end with Pauline Combs.

Mr. Emil Rackrohr is enjoying a few days vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Baldwin spent Washington's birthday in Chicago.

The woman's Guild of the Lutheran church of Oak Forest were entertained at the home of Mrs. Sandeen Feb. 25th, bunco was played and prizes were awarded after which refreshments were served.

Mrs. Ada Erp and Mrs. Nina Roesner gave a hard time dancing party for the benefit of the Midlothian woman's Club Saturday evening in the new club house. There were many quaint costumes, a jolly crowd hot dogs! coffee, rolls nuf said.

to come"

From the action of the assembly Monday night, it would appear that this plan of procedure was given an application in the activities of the Improvement Association for after a season of discussion every "grade" of difference of opinion, was smothered out and the gleaming, "white way" of Wolfe road, stood out before the organization clear, clean and smooth without an obstruction, bearing every "mark of skill and good judgment".

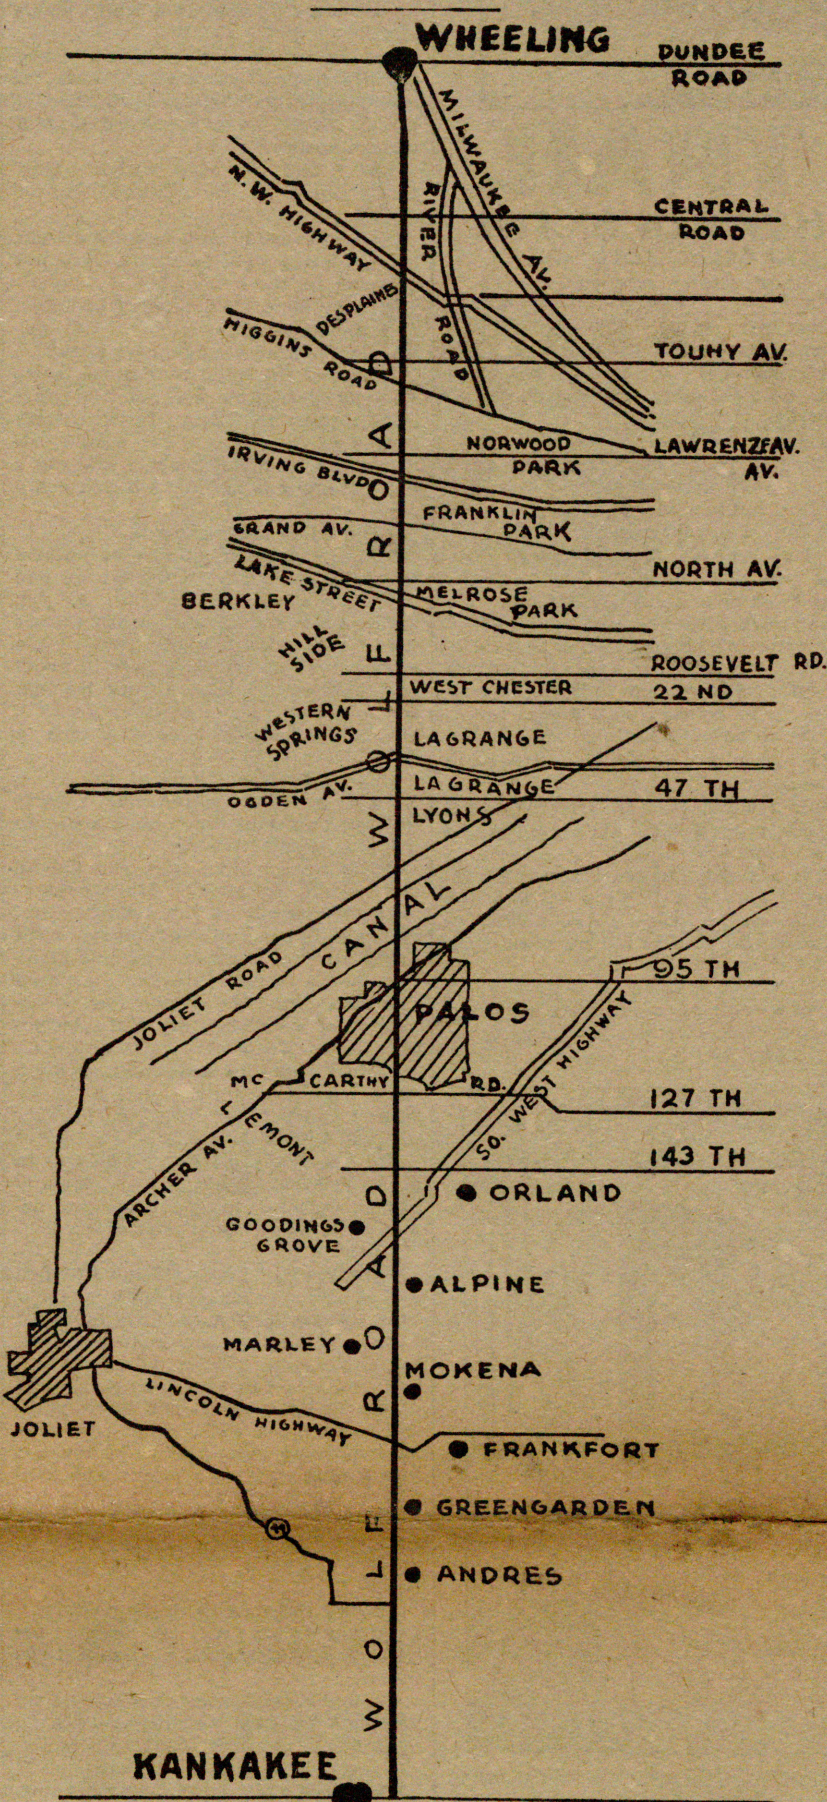

Pleading words were spoken in short addresses by members and by the visitors among whom were John Kline of Orland, Leigh Jones, Fred Francis, Ernest Oram and others of New Lenox. The visitors in motion were made. Honorary members of the Association.

Chairman McGovney suggested a very appropriate resolution, concerning our friendly relations with the neighboring community of Frankfort, and upon motion it was enthusiastically and unanimously adopted by a rising vote.

Maps and literature were distributed by Mr. Bruder of the committee on literature and stationary and provisions were made for an energetic publicity program in which every member is to take an active part.

The meeting adjourned to reassemble, Tuesday evening March 1st at 8 o'clock.

Above is a map of the proposed Wolf Road Highway. As shown this route is a straight airline from the city of Kankakee on the south to Wheeling in the northern most part of Cook County. The publicity committee of the Mokena Development and Hard Road Improvement Association has issued a large number of circulars showing the above map. These circulars urge that Wolfe

Road route 51 be made a hard road and describe this road as the great north and south trunk line from Kankakee to Wheeling and that it is the connecting link of all east and west highways from the Lincoln highway in Will County to the Dundee road in northern Cook county. The Wolfe Road connects with the proposed super Southwest Highway of Cook County north of Mokena.

Highway 51 Not Located Yet

The following letter received by L. G. Bruder of Mokena on the matter of location of route 51, from C. R. Miller, Director of Public Works and Buildings, is self explanatory:

Springfield, Ill. Feb. 23, 1927
Mr. L. G. Bruder,
Plymouth Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Dear Mr. Bruder:
Your communication of Feb. 12 to Governor Len Small, relative to State Bond Issue Route 51, was referred to the writer with the request that it receive careful consideration.

No location has been made of State Bond Issue Route 51 nor will said location be made until Public Hearing has been held in connection with the location. You will be advised of the date and place of that public hearing, and we will be glad to have it given all publicity possible and to have the views of yourself and your friends presented as to the location at that Public Hearing.

Yours very truly,
C. R. MILLER, Director.

O. P. Pease New Lenox Pioneer Dies

Orville P. Pease, aged 75 years, a pioneer settler of New Lenox township, died at his home in the village of New Lenox on Feb. 20. He had been in poor health for sometime. Mr. Pease lived on a farm south of New Lenox for many years, and a few years ago he retired from the farm and located in the village of New Lenox. He is survived by his widow, one son Charles of New Lenox, four daughters, Mrs. Anna Cooper, of Rockford, Mrs. Hattie Pugh, and Mrs. Laura Carlson of New Lenox and Mrs. Marie Timm of Manhattan.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the Grace Episcopal church at New Lenox at two o'clock, Rev. T. DeWitt Tanner of Joliet officiating. Interment in the Maplewood cemetery, New Lenox. Mr. Pease was a Mason and also a member of the M. W. A.

Chairman Lankenau Says He Has Been Unjustly Criticised In Road Resolution Matter

Chairman Wm. Lankenau of the Will County Board says he has been unjustly criticised in certain articles appearing in the News-Bulletin regarding his connection with a certain resolution which the Mokena Development and Hard Road Improvement Association passed endorsing the issuance of a $2,500,000 bond issue for hard roads in Will county which Chairman Lankenau was requested to present to the county board.

Chairman Lankenau says that the report is untrue that he ignored the Mokena resolution as has been said and that he did give the resolution to the clerk of the board who filed same, but as the board was not in favor of a county bond issue, the resolution was not called for a reading.

Chairman Lankenau also states that Supervisor Nicholas Welter of Homer was not ignored and was given an opportunity to speak on the bond issue and did have the floor for ten minutes, but no motion was made favoring the bond issue.

The News-Bulletin always gives two sides of every issue and takes pleasure in presenting Chairman Lankenau's side of the matter.

MILK MEN'S MEETING AT MOKENA MARCH 1

Meeting of Milk Producers called for Mokena at 8 p. m., Tuesday, March 1st at St. Mary's Hall by the Pure Milk Association to outline to the dairymen their program for 1927. This meeting will be an open meeting where everybody will be given an opportunity to express their views. Is $3 for milk possible this year? The Pure Milk Association says "yes" and their answer is not just "Join and we will get it". They will outline their plan. Come, see if you think it is sound! St. Mary's Hall, Tuesday, March 1st. A big auction sale is going to be held on March 7th by H. and D. Balchowsky of the remainder of the stock not sold during the big sale of the former firm of B. Balchowsky & Sons of Frankfort last summer. This sale marks the end of the largest store ever established in Frankfort. Charles Erickson of Mokena is to be the auctioneer.

New St. John's Cemetery To Be Model One

The St. John's Cemetery Association of Mokena is making plans for laying out a new addition this year to the present St. John Cemetery. An egg shaped road and a new entrance are to be built in the new addition and the lots will be neatly laid out. It is planned to make this one of the prettiest burial plots for many miles around. At a meeting held in St. John's church Monday afternoon it was voted that any one of the Protestant faith outside of colored folks, can buy lots and be buried in this cemetery without joining any particular church.

CHAPTER VI

Into the Wilderness

"No, we will go to Murray's tavern," I said. "I will ask him if he thinks he can commit assassination here in the town as he does in the forest."

"Good," rejoined Ta-wan-nears impassively. "I will accompany my brother there."

I remembered that De Veuille lodged at Cawston's, and hesitated.

"Let my brother Ormerod be at ease," added the Indian. "Ta-wan-nears has mastered his hatred."

"I, too, hate my enemy," I said.

He was silent for as much as ten paces.

"My brother means De Veuille?" he asked.

"Yes; I once crossed swords with him."

"And he lives! Did he wound my brother?"

I recounted briefly the circumstances of the duel at the Tolson d'Ore.

"I am glad my brother spared him," he said then. "For Ta-wan-nears has often prayed to Ha-wen-ne-yu, the Great Spirit, to give him the life of this man who lives as though he were one of the fiends of the Ga-ga-sa (False Faces)."

At Cawston's we looked in vain for Murray or any of his party in the taproom and ordinary, so without a word to the servants we ascended the stairs to the upper floor. In the hall I halted momentarily, considering which door to knock upon, when the puzzle was solved by the opening of the one by which we stood.

My Lady appeared, and she started back in amazement, tinged with fear, at sight of me and the stalwart, half-naked figure of the Seneca.

I bowed to her.

"Good evening, Mistress Murray," I said. "I am come with my friend for a word with your father."

"He is engaged," she answered quickly.

"That may be, but I must speak with him on a matter of much importance. I am obliged to ask your father for the second time if he condones assassination in the dark."

Her eyes widened with horror, then darkened with stony anger.

"Sir, you are monstrous impudent!" she exclaimed. "How dare you suggest such a thing?"

"Because it occurred a quarter-hour past."

"And because you are assailed by some footpad in a disreputable part of the town, is that a reason for you to charge Master Murray with assassination?" she demanded with high contempt.

"Oh, I have proof," I said.

My anger grew with hers. It maddened me that this girl, who I knew was honest, should be arrayed against me, should hold for me the contempt of a clean woman for a man she deemed a traitor.

The door behind her opened, and Murray himself came out.

"I thought I heard voices—Ah, Master Juggins—"

"Ormerod," I interrupted suavely. His eyebrows expressed polite astonishment.

"To be sure. Forgive my stupidity. It hath gone so far as that already, hath it?"

"It hath gone so far as attempted assassination—for the second time," I retorted.

"Assassination? Tut, tut," he rebuked me. "Master Ormerod, you use strong language. And who in this little town of ours would seek to murder a gentleman new-landed like yourself?"

Ta-wan-nears stepped to the front.

"Does Murray know this scalp?" He permitted an end of the lock of Bolling's hair to show through his clinched fingers.

Marjory shrank back in terror. Murray's face became convulsed with passion.

"'Death!' he swore. 'If Bolling is dead by this savage's hand I shall know the wherefore of it! What? Do the Iroquois take scalps within the city?'"

Ta-wan-nears laughed, and slowly opened his fist to reveal the single lock of hair.

"Ta-wan-nears only takes the scalps of honorable warriors," he said in his smooth, low-pitched voice. "But the Red Death escaped tonight by the width of these hairs. Does Murray think Ga-en-gwa-ra-go would have been angry with Ta-wan-nears if the tomahawk had struck true?"

Murray wiped beads of perspiration from his face.

"So 'twas Bolling!" he muttered. "Curse the knave! What hath he done?"

"No more than attempted to murder me, sir—as I have attempted to tell you," I answered ironically.

Marjory came forward, hands clasped in exostulation.

"It isn't so! It can't be so! Tell him he lies, sir!" she pleaded with Murray.

He put her gently to one side.

"Peace, peace, my dear," he said. "You do not understand."

"But Bolling was one of your people, sir. You told me—"

"Tut, tut, my dear Marjory. You are new to this new world of ours. The frontier is not like Scotland. We must work with what tools we find. I say it to my sorrow—and he said it furthermore without even the twitch of an eyelid—I am compelled occasionally to consort with men I might prefer to do without."

He gave his attention once more to me.

"In a word, Master Ormerod, what hath happened that you approach me in so hostile a spirit?"

"In a word, Master Murray," I replied, "your man Bolling, or 'The Red Death,' as he seems to be known in these parts, tried to kill me with knife and hatchet this evening."

"I am constrained to believe you," he said with an appearance of much sorrow, "but I cannot hold myself responsible, sir. As it happens, Bolling quarreled with me this afternoon in the presence of half a dozen well known citizens of the town, and I dismissed him from my service."

"Pardon me," I said with a laugh, "if I express some—"

"Do you step within," he responded with civility. "I shall be glad if you will satisfy yourself by questioning witnesses of the dispute. Marjory, will you—"

"I will stay," she said positively.

He shrugged his shoulders and stood aside. I motioned to Marjory, and she re-entered first. I walked next, and the Seneca followed me, one hand resting on his knife hilt.

Murray shut the door behind us, and I found myself in a large room, sufficiently lighted by candles. Five or six men, who had been talking at a table, looked up with interest as we came in. One of them was De Veuille, and I felt rather than saw the massive frame of Ta-wan-nears gather itself together exactly as does the wildcat when he sights his quarry.

The others I did not know. Later Ta-wan-nears told me they were respectable merchants identified with the faction in the province who were hostile to Governor Burnet, and all were for the closest trade relations with Canada.

Murray turned to me, after recounting my errand, and said:

"Your companion is evidently a chief, Master Ormerod. Will you identify him?"

Before I could say anything Ta-wan-nears responded for himself.

"I am Ta-wan-nears, of the Clan of the Wolf, war chief of the Senecas, and nephew to Do-ne-ho-ga-weh, the Guardian of the Western Door of the Long House."

He spoke directly to De Veuille, and the Frenchman's eyes shifted from his level glance.

"Must we have an Indian present?" he muttered. "This is a white man's affair."

"As it happens, this Indian saved my life from a white man's knife," I replied quickly. "He is my brother. I would rather have him here than a woman-stealer."

But I had reckoned without Marjory. She took the situation out of my hands.

"Sir," she said, "you seem to delight in slandering gentlemen who are not disloyal to their friends. I beseech you, have done. 'Tis a sorry business, and gains naught for you. Get forward with what brought you here."

I marked the relief that shone in De Veuille's eyes. I marked, too, the penetrating glance which Ta-wan-nears bent upon her face. For myself, although I felt sick at heart, I said nothing. There was nothing which I could say.

I turned to Murray again.

"This conversation must be painful to us," I said. "Let us make an end to it. Bolling attacked me, as you know. My friend and brother here saved me and drove him away. We have a lock of Bolling's hair in proof of the attempt. 'Tis in your interest to do what you can to clear yourself of responsibility for so dastardly a crime."

One of the merchants at the table, a very decent appearing man, soberly dressed and with much good sense in his face, caught me up.

"'Tis not strange that you should have come to Master Murray after such an attempt as you mention, sir," he began in conciliatory fashion. "But fortunately we were present this afternoon when Master Murray dismissed the man from his employ, in consequence of his dishonesty and misdealing during Master Murray's absence."

"Aye," spoke up a second merchant, "and sure, the knave must have attacked you hoping 'twould be brought against Master Murray."

"Not to speak of the fact he was in great need of funds, Master Murray having refused to grant certain demands he made," suggested a third.

I bowed.

"Gentlemen," I said, "I am satisfied—that Master Murray hath a stout case. There is no more need be said."

"Ah, but there is more to be said," flared Marjory. "Think shame of yourself, sir, to be forever believing against others motives which you know yourself to be laden with. You were once an honorable man. Why do you not mend your ways and regain the self-respect of your kind?"

"God send there be an honorable man to hand when your need comes, mistress," I said. "Good evening, gentlemen."

Murray escorted us to the door.

Ta-wan-nears walked beside me without speaking until we had left the tavern.

"I understand your thoughts, my brother," he said suddenly. "We go upon the same quest."

"Quest?" I repeated. "What quest?"

"We each seek a soul which is lost, a sick soul."

I remembered his rage against De Veuille, and caught his meaning.

"Yes, that is true of you, Ta-wan-nears. But there is no soul which I have the right to seek."

"Nevertheless, my brother would find the soul of the maiden and guard it," he insisted. "I have seen."

I saw the grave smile, with a hint of pleading, on his face; and I reached out and caught his hand.

"Whatever be the end of my search, brother," I said, "I will go to the setting sun, and beyond if need be, to aid you to find the soul which you seek."

"The same words are in my heart, brother," he replied simply.

"Bolling hath disappeared," said Governor Burnet. "I have given orders to all officers and troops and town officials that he is to be detained if he ventures to appear, but the knave—or, I should say his master—is too wise. By the way, an express arrived from Fort Orange (Albany) last night and reported having spoken Murray's party in the Tappan zee. He will be a good three days ahead of you, 'twould seem."

"I am not sorry," I answered. "Have you any further instructions for me, sir?"

The governor unfolded the map of the wilderness country which he had exhibited to me during my first visit.

Library's Great Value Not Fully Realized

Our libraries can be made one of the most potent instruments of a creative citizenship, which aims at humanizing that grim industrialism, the grip of which tightens every day. Our policy must be to teach the community to find in the library a central laboratory of sweetness and light—a radiating power house of the spiritual and intellectual antidotes to the mechanistic materialism with which life today is saturated and by which it is degraded. We must insist that the library represents the literature of power, as distinct from the literature of knowledge and of information. Just as most men and women cannot understand maps without careful instruction, so most readers do not know really how to read. We have taught our people to decipher print;

Before I could say anything Ta-wan-nears responded for himself.

"I am Ta-wan-nears, of the Clan of the Wolf, war chief of the Senecas, and nephew to Do-ne-ho-ga-weh, the Guardian of the Western Door of the Long House."

One of the merchants at the table, a very decent appearing man, soberly dressed and with much good sense in his face, caught me up.

"'Tis not strange that you should have come to Master Murray after such an attempt as you mention, sir," he began in conciliatory fashion. "But fortunately we were present this afternoon when Master Murray dismissed the man from his employ, in consequence of his dishonesty and misdealing during Master Murray's absence."

"Aye," spoke up a second merchant, "and sure, the knave must have attacked you hoping 'twould be brought against Master Murray."

"Not to speak of the fact he was in great need of funds, Master Murray having refused to grant certain demands he made," suggested a third.

I bowed.

"Gentlemen," I said, "I am satisfied—that Master Murray hath a stout case. There is no more need be said."

"Ah, but there is more to be said," flared Marjory. "Think shame of yourself, sir, to be forever believing against others motives which you know yourself to be laden with. You were once an honorable man. Why do you not mend your ways and regain the self-respect of your kind?"

"God send there be an honorable man to hand when your need comes, mistress," I said. "Good evening, gentlemen."

Murray escorted us to the door.

Ta-wan-nears walked beside me without speaking until we had left the tavern.

"I understand your thoughts, my brother," he said suddenly. "We go upon the same quest."

"Quest?" I repeated. "What quest?"

"We each seek a soul which is lost, a sick soul."

I remembered his rage against De Veuille, and caught his meaning.

"Yes, that is true of you, Ta-wan-nears. But there is no soul which I have the right to seek."

"Nevertheless, my brother would find the soul of the maiden and guard it," he insisted. "I have seen."

I saw the grave smile, with a hint of pleading, on his face; and I reached out and caught his hand.

"Whatever be the end of my search, brother," I said, "I will go to the setting sun, and beyond if need be, to aid you to find the soul which you seek."

"The same words are in my heart, brother," he replied simply.

"Bolling hath disappeared," said Governor Burnet. "I have given orders to all officers and troops and town officials that he is to be detained if he ventures to appear, but the knave—or, I should say his master—is too wise. By the way, an express arrived from Fort Orange (Albany) last night and reported having spoken Murray's party in the Tappan zee. He will be a good three days ahead of you, 'twould seem."

"I am not sorry," I answered. "Have you any further instructions for me, sir?"

The governor unfolded the map of the wilderness country which he had exhibited to me during my first visit.

quarreled with me this afternoon in the presence of half a dozen well known citizens of the town, and I dismissed him from my service."

"Pardon me," I said with a laugh, "if I express some—"

"Do you step within," he responded with civility. "I shall be glad if you will satisfy yourself by questioning witnesses of the dispute. Marjory, will you—"

"I will stay," she said positively.

He shrugged his shoulders and stood aside. I motioned to Marjory, and she re-entered first. I walked next, and the Seneca followed me, one hand resting on his knife hilt.

Murray shut the door behind us, and I found myself in a large room, sufficiently lighted by candles. Five or six men, who had been talking at a table, looked up with interest as we came in. One of them was De Veuille, and I felt rather than saw the massive frame of Ta-wan-nears gather itself together exactly as does the wildcat when he sights his quarry.

The others I did not know. Later Ta-wan-nears told me they were respectable merchants identified with the faction in the province who were hostile to Governor Burnet, and all were for the closest trade relations with Canada.

Murray turned to me, after recounting my errand, and said:

"Your companion is evidently a chief, Master Ormerod. Will you identify him?"

Before I could say anything Ta-wan-nears responded for himself.

"I am Ta-wan-nears, of the Clan of the Wolf, war chief of the Senecas, and nephew to Do-ne-ho-ga-weh, the Guardian of the Western Door of the Long House."

He spoke directly to De Veuille, and the Frenchman's eyes shifted from his level glance.

"Must we have an Indian present?" he muttered. "This is a white man's affair."

"As it happens, this Indian saved my life from a white man's knife," I replied quickly. "He is my brother. I would rather have him here than a woman-stealer."

But I had reckoned without Marjory. She took the situation out of my hands.

"Sir," she said, "you seem to delight in slandering gentlemen who are not disloyal to their friends. I beseech you, have done. 'Tis a sorry business, and gains naught for you. Get forward with what brought you here."

I marked the relief that shone in De Veuille's eyes. I marked, too, the penetrating glance which Ta-wan-nears bent upon her face. For myself, although I felt sick at heart, I said nothing. There was nothing which I could say.

I turned to Murray again.

"This conversation must be painful to us," I said. "Let us make an end to it. Bolling attacked me, as you know. My friend and brother here saved me and drove him away. We have a lock of Bolling's hair in proof of the attempt. 'Tis in your interest to do what you can to clear yourself of responsibility for so dastardly a crime."

One of the merchants at the table, a very decent appearing man, soberly dressed and with much good sense in his face, caught me up.

"'Tis not strange that you should have come to Master Murray after such an attempt as you mention, sir," he began in conciliatory fashion. FLORAL PRINTS FOR HOUSEWEAR; SUPPLE SILHOUETTE IN FAVOR

SOME airs the erstwhile simple housedress is putting on nowadays! Even the materials from which it is made are delightfully camouflaging in appearance, especially the highly mercerized cottons whose colorful floral prints duplicate in patterning and in sheen the more expensive silks. When it comes to laundering, these handsome prints prove themselves not only lovable, but tubable to the point of perfection.

Pretty Washable House Dress.

The compose mode is given a place of first importance in the styling of the "last word" washable frocks. To the "I-always-make-my-own-wash-dresses" enthusiast here is a timely hint—when you buy a dress length of fancy print or gay gingham, be sure to purchase a solid colored material for the pockets, necktie, collar, cuffs and other trimming details. Then again choose a rather "fussy" pattern, at least see to it that there be no suggestion of the at-one-time popular bungalow apron style. Rather select a model as here pictured, with circular skirt, fancy tie-collar 'n' everything. Cotton fabrics were never so alluring as at this very moment. Highly mercerized weaves patterned in fowlard suggestions are among most re-selves not only lovable, but tubable to the point of perfection.

Especially are new color combinations and effects being whirled into the arena of the mode at a dizzying rate. Fashionists are defining color in the plural. This color compose idea, which is the underlying principle of most of the fashionable color schemes, interprets two methods, that of combining various tones and tints of the same color, or using contrast shades.

It is the modish color plus color idea which so enhances the attractive frock in this picture. For this model the designer employs queen's blue crepe with French gray. The latter is used for the blouse below the bolero outline and for the collar and below-the-elbow sleeve puffs. Another color version which could be successfully worked out in this frock would be cent showings in the wash-goods section. One of these can't-tell-from-silk fabrics which glorifies the colorful cotton print was chosen for the attractive daytime washable frock in the picture. Its monotone color trim expresses an outstanding style note.

Sprightly floral prints prevail in spring cottons. Among charming new washable materials cotton crepes are shown patterned in tiny blossoms with a tweed-like background, batistes in alluring flower designs on a white base, voiles billowed in resplendent coloring and the latest effects are that of Grecian rose with monkey skin, the new pinkish tone introduced this season. Which all goes to show that the two-color theme is playing a tremendously important part in the styling of crepe, also crepe-satin frocks for afternoon wear.

Of no less interest than the color question is that of the supple silhouette, which is giving such a feminized aspect to the mode. Skirts whose fullness is attained through plaits or gathers, the bolero and the blouse combine to achieve the soft, pretty comforts so approved for the coming months. The frock in the picture is characteristic of this new vogue. For the upper portion of the bodice the stylist uses the queen's blue crepe, simulating a bolero posed over a very smart blouse. Plaits at the front of the skirt only, further interpret the mode.

The fact that so many of the new materials are soft and often sheer gives impetus to the new graceful silhouette.

A car for every purse and purpose

THIS YEAR the General Motors line is an imposing Automobile Show in itself.

Here is every style of body. Every type of design — four cylinder, six cylinder, eight cylinder. Every improvement. Every price, from the Chevrolet touring car at $510 to the Cadillac with special coach work at $9,000. A car for every purse and purpose.

Every one of the models now on display is different and distinguished. Yet two unifying characteristics bind them all together:

1 EVERY CLOSED BODY is by Fisher. The quality of all body workmanship is Fisher quality, and because Fisher is owned by General Motors, every resource has been utilized to make body and chassis a perfect quality unit.

2 EVERY MODEL has shared in the advantages of General Motors research, purchasing standards and Proving Ground tests; and in the economies of volume production. Dollar for dollar you will buy more value in the car you select because of General Motors quality and the public's purchase of more than 1,200,000 General Motors cars last year.

THE GENERAL MOTORS line is a direct result of the record-breaking patronage accorded by the public in 1926. The economies which this great volume afforded have been passed on to the car purchaser in even better quality. With great pride we invite you to inspect these new General Motors cars and to make one or more of them your own.

Purity of Milk Protected Now By Scientists

By KATHRYN ST. JOHN

Careful housewives constantly make it a point to ascertain the quality of each item that goes on their tables. Preparing food for the family is an extremely important job, for the proper selection and preparation of foods make in a large measure for the health and happiness of the family.

Milk is the most nearly perfect food, but it is a very delicate one as well. The keeping qualities of milk are slight. Danger from contamination is ever present. Evaporated milk, which is double rich because of the removal of 60 per cent of the water, is science's solution to these conditions.

Safeguarding evaporated milk is worked out as perfectly as man's ingenuity has been able to make the process. From cow to can, the milk which goes into the evaporated product is watched every step of the way.

Cows of the dairy herds are guarded with constant care and are subjected to regular inspections by veterinary surgeons. Herds are carefully groomed, and their yards and barns are kept scrupulously clean, as are all utensils. Milk condenseries are located in the heart of the big dairy regions to facilitate speedy handling, for this is essential if the milk is to be canned at "its moment of maturity." Canvas-covered trucks haul the milk to market, thus protecting the product from contamination on the way. Arriving at the condenser, the milk goes through tests for acidity, sediment, flavor and butterfat content before it is accepted.

Experts watch the progress of the milk through every step of its way. It goes into the evaporating machine; to the homogenizer, which breaks up the fat globules so that the milk may be easily digested by the consumer; by way of the almost human filling machine into sterilized cans; then into the sterilizer, where the cans are surrounded by steam and boiling water, destroying any possible bacteria. Inspectors handle the product as the last step to see that the canning job has been perfectly done. Labeling and packing follow. The housewife obtains the milk as fresh and sweet as when it came from the cow.

Butt of the Joke

One of the agriculture study classes in the Scipio schools had been studying sheep, and one of the test questions required that four breeds or kinds of sheep be named. One boy could recall three kinds, but not the fourth. Finally, in desperation, he added, "hydraulic ram."

We're Literary All Right

The highbrow that argues that we are not a literary people any more should have seen that fat girl lying right smack on her tummy on a bench in the Pennsylvania station the other night reading a vivid magazine. Guess he'd take back them cruel words—Wilmington News-Journal.

Region of Intense Heat

The climate of Death valley, Calif., is due in a measure to its configuration. It consists of a long, narrow, parallel valley, considerably below sea level. The Panamint mountains shut out from it the moist winds of the Pacific, so that in August there is less than one-half of 1 per cent of moisture in the atmosphere.

Lighthouse Illumination

Most of the American lighthouses guarding ships against coastal rocks have now run the complete gamut of lighting in the last 200 years. They began with fish oil and then proceeded through sperm oil, rapeseed or colza oil, lard oil, vaporized kerosene with incandescent mantles and finally electricity upon which main dependence is put nowadays.

Slaves Were Shaved

A clean-shaven face in the East was originally a sign of servitude. Old pictures show kings and conquerors heavily bearded and with long hair, while their slaves and captives are clean-shaven and close-cropped. The Greeks and the Romans later discarded "face fungus," as it gave their enemies a hand-hold in the close fighting, which was, of course, the rule in those days.

Polar Region Cold

Theoretically it can never get much colder than 60 degrees below zero at the North pole, which lies in deep ocean. The cold pole of the northern hemisphere, far from coinciding with the North pole, is believed to be on the continent of Asia north of Irkutsk, where the temperature is said occasionally to fall to 90 degrees below zero F.

State Official's View On Retesting

Commenting on upon the situation in the Chicago dairy district, Director Stanard of the state department of agriculture, quotes records of tuberculosis eradication work that has been done in the counties surrounding Chicago.

"During most of the time this work has been under the direction of the state, our forces have had to meet emergencies in the Chicago district, created by rulings from the health department of the city of Chicago. The recent order, demanding that cattle be retested within 6 months, is an illustration. This ruling came as a surprise to us, as we expected Chicago to abide by the health commissioner's agreement to recognize contracts between the cattle owners and the state and federal departments of agriculture, and to admit milk from such herds while the retesting work was in progress.

"Relative to the advancement of the work in the Chicago district as has been stated, far more than twice as many tests were made during the past year than in any preceding twelve months. At the time this order was issued, retesting work was advanced to a degree never before reached in the eradication program.

"I might add that of the entire sum that has been expended as indemnity for tubercular cattle over the entire state, from the Illinois and the federal treasury together, more than 65 per cent has been paid for reactors detected in the 11 counties in the Chicago district.

"This department is doing all that it possibly can. County boards are doing all they can to meet this ruling. Veterinarians in the district, with others added daily, as opportunities permit, are doing splendid work.

"If this ruling effected only dairymen as have not done their part, there might be more justification in it. Such is not the case. It will deprive of a market, and of their only means of support, any number of farmers who have made every effort to have the tests made as promptly as the detailed work of the program permits. However, the retests will be completed within a few days after the date set by Bundesen if we are able to continue testing at the present rate of speed."

Voicing the sentiment of the milk distributors in the Chicago dairy district, F. B. Walmsley, head of their organization, learning of the increased force of veterinarians engaged in testing activities within the district and an effort to comply with the ruling made by Health Commissioner Bundesen that all cattle be twice tested for tuberculosis within six months, telegraphed Director Stanard of the state department of agriculture as follows:

"Telegram relative to additional veterinarians most thankfully received. With this kind of cooperation we should be able to cope with the situation."

State officials directing this increased activity are not promising complete relief to the distressed milk producers of the district. The task of retesting all herds that do not now comply with Bundesen's recent ruling, they say, is more than can be accomplished within the time limit he sets by all the available approved veterinarians. They agree, however, that with the cooperation of county boards, in and out of the district, in the arrangement whereby county veterinarians from downstate lend their assistance, supplementing the testing that is being done by the state's veterinarians, will save for most of the farmers in the district, the market that is threatened by the health commissioner's order.

ORLAND

The funeral of Miss Ruth L. Kesser took place on Saturday afternoon, February 19th. The service took place at the house with a duet sung by Misses Clarise Mahaffay and Clara Myerick, which was followed by a prayer by Rev. E. L. Setterlund, pastor of the Orland M. E. Church. After the prayer the local chapter of the Royal Neighbors conducted a beautiful ritual service.

The church funeral was under the leadership of the pastor of the Orland M. E. Church who was assisted by members of the choir and Mrs. Adelle Cooper at the piano. The church was filled with sympathizing relatives and friends. Burial took place at the Brooks Cemetery.

Ethel LaRue Kesser, born at Lemont, Du Page Co. Illinois, Oct. 13, 1889. Died Feb. 16, 1927, at St. Francis Hospital, Blue Island, Age 37 years, 4 months and 3 days. Beloved daughter of Mrs. Clara and the late Sylvester Kesser. Sister of Mrs. Wm. Whinnery, New York City, N. Y., Mrs. Andrew Welter, Goodings Grove, Ill. and John Kesser, Orland, Ill.

She was the eldest child residing with her mother at Goodings Grove, Ill., the family house since 1892. She was a member of the Orland Methodist church since childhood; and a member of Good Luck Camp No. 2214, Royal Neighbors of America.

Her willing helpful, kindly nature, pleasing personality, and self denial in thoughtfulness of others has endeared her memory in the hearts of all who knew her.

"To live in the hearts of those we love is not to die."

Thursday, February 10th, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cooper celebrated their 10th wedding anniversary, about thirty guests being present. An oyster supper was served. The guests were unanimous in wishing them many more happy anniversaries.

Sunday, February 27 Bible school at 9:30 a.m. Morning worship at 10:30. This church extends an "open door" to all folks of the Orland community who have no church home and are "detached" from any religious organization. If you fail to identify yourself with the church of your choice in this community there are three churches—you are the loser and the community at large is that much poorer spiritually and morally. You need religious culture as much as those of us who enjoy it.

Evening service this Sunday is at Worth Community Church. We unite with them and everyone is cordially invited. Special music by the choir of the Orland M. E. church. Special evening services for the next two weeks in March as follows:

Sunday evening, March 6th. A set of beautiful pictures on the Rockies of Washington and a talk on the mountains by Mr. A. W. Lind of Seattle. Mr. Lind has been employed by the U. S. Forestry Service in Washington and speaks from his own experience. Everyone welcome.

Sunday evening, March 13th. A set of pictures and a talk on "The Life and Times of Martin Luther and the Protestant Reformation in Germany". Do not miss this opportunity.

Tuesday evening, Feb. 15th a young people's valentine party was held at the Orland M. E. church parlors. There was a large attendance of young people. A set of unique Valentine games including such tragic things as "broken hearts" were enjoyed by all participants. Tempting refreshments including cocoa, cakes, iced cookies, candied hearts were served. The general direction of the affair was in the hands of Miss Clara Myrick.

Mrs. David Agate has returned to her home after a period of convalescing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ludwig of Lemont, where she went after a stay at Silver Cross Hospital, Joliet.

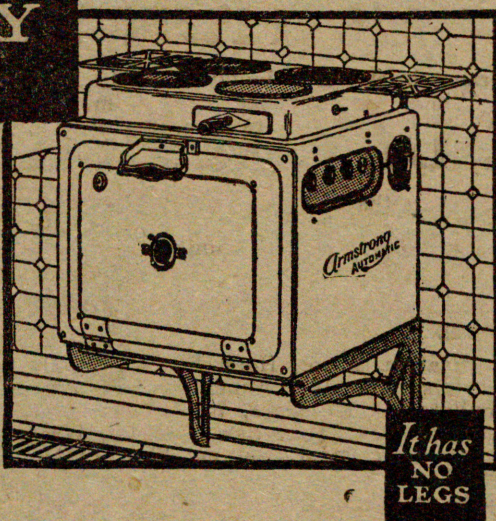

The funeral of Miss Ethel LaRue Kesser was held at the home and the Orland M. E. church on Saturday last. At the house the local camp of the Royal Neighbors had a brief ritual service. At the church the service was conducted by the pastor of the Orland M. E. church. Burial in Brooks Cemetery.

Old World Charm Meets New World Conveniences

PLACING your house according to your lot is the privilege of the person who builds this practical dwelling of the English farm house type. The entrance is so arranged that the house may either be placed lengthwise for a thirty-foot city lot or crosswise for a 60 or 75 foot lot.

The design here calls for a combination of stucco and stained siding with roof or dark weathered shingles. The pleasing features of the living room include its windows on three sides, open fireplace and built-in book shelves. The open porch or sunroom may open off from either the living or dining room. The kitchen has all the details that delight the housewife—cupboards, broom closet, breakfast nook and double windows over the sink.

The three bedrooms all have double exposures and are well provided with clothes and linen closets. The bathroom is so placed as to be equally accessible from each bedroom. The attic is ventilated and makes a serviceable storage or playroom by sheathing the rafters and sides with stucco, which serves both as a wall-board and insulating material.

This small home so light and spacious, yet compact and adapted to doing without a servant, is a typical 1926 product. The poky, dark houses of fifteen or even ten years ago with their fussy little hallways and poor planning would be scorned by the modern housewife who has learned to expect comfort built right into her home and to have everything planned for her convenience in working. Cold, draughty houses are also out of date. All well built houses, are insulated as this one is, with sheathing on the exterior walls under the stucco. This effects a great saving in fuel in the winter and resists the intense heat of the sun in summer.

Timely Tips to Home Gardeners

For Greatest Success Keep Cultivating—Thinning Is Favored.

Thorough cultivation is one of the secrets of successful gardening. On a small scale this is best accomplished by use of a rake or hoe; when the plants are close together it may be necessary to use a hand scratcher, and for crops planted farther apart in rows the wheel hoe or shuffle hoe will give good results.

There are four good reasons why we cultivate. First, cultivation destroys the weeds which if allowed to grow consume moisture and plant food. Second, it produces a mulch and conserves soil moisture which will be needed, particularly during dry weather. Third, it is necessary to allow air to get into the soil in order to allow friendly bacteria to enter; and finally a clean, neat, cultivated garden presents a much better appearance than one which is full of weeds and is not cultivated.

Mulching Pays.

Straw manure or lawn rakings placed around a plant will conserve moisture. This mulch is an aid in cutting down weeds, and preventing the ground from becoming hard. If either of these materials is available, it would be well worth while to use them in this manner.

Vegetables, like animals, need a certain amount of space for their best development. If they are planted too thickly they will not receive the proper amount of water or plant food, and will not do as well as if thinned to proper distances.

Seed of beets, radishes, turnips, parsnips, carrots, rutabagas, onions, etc., must be sown rather thickly because many of the seeds will not germinate. However, when the plants have attained the size of from 2 to 4 inches, pull out the small ones leaving only the larger and best plants every 2 or 3 inches in the row.

Proper Thinning Pays.

Proper thinning gives the plants a chance to grow large roots, enables the sunlight to get to the base of the plants and also allows room for a free circulation of air which will tend to ward off certain stem diseases. Instead of throwing away your thinned plants, replant them carefully in another part of the garden. They will grow and give very good results.

Road Building Increases in Middle West States

License fees and receipts from the gasoline tax are believed to have done more for road building and highway improvement in the past year than any other element, according to a survey made of fourteen middle west states' reports on the season's highway activities.

In the eleven states during the past year 8,950,000 passenger cars and trucks were licensed, and with this tremendous traffic bringing in revenue to the government, more than 9,000 miles of highway, were either newly paved or improved. The cost of the 9,000 miles is around $94,000,000, covering the area of the states included in the survey. The taxes reported for this work totaled over $125,000,000.

Segregate Breeders

If a special breeding pen including the best male bird and a few choice hens is to be kept they should be isolated at once. If the hens used have been with other males no eggs should be saved until three weeks after isolation in order to make sure that the male heading the pen is the father of the chicks hatched. If the hens have not been with other males, the eggs will practically all be fertile after about a week. When the breeding season is over, discard the roosters.

FARM FACTS

Lack of fresh air will make work seem harder in winter or summer.

Litter on the poultry house floor should be clean and dry and from four to six inches deep.

Live poultry sometimes shrinks as much as 17 per cent in weight during the time it is in transit to market.

There is more profit and pleasure from one well-pruned and well-sprayed fruit tree than from ninety and nine neglected ones.

Numerous auctions will be held during the next few weeks and it is well to remember that cattle sell much better when it is known they have passed a clean tuberculosis test.

A slight improvement in his feeding methods made a difference of more than $46 in the monthly returns of an Illinois dairyman last fall. A change in the ration made the feed cost less, yet the cows produced more butterfat.

Most bankers are much more willing to lend money on favorable terms to the farmer who can furnish a clean-cut statement of his net worth than to the farmer who never takes an inventory and who never keeps records which are evidences of his business efficiency.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1927, Western Newspaper Union.)

We take care of our health, we lay up money, we make our roof tight, and our clothing sufficient, but who provides wisely that we shall not be wanting in the best property of all—friends?

A MEAL ON THE FARM

The average farm wife, when entertaining a city friend, will invariably serve city food if she can manage it and if not, be so full of apology for serving that which is so common to her.

What more delicious food could be prepared than baked potatoes served with sweet country pork, fried crisp and brown and served with a delicious gravy made from the fat, thickened with flour and thinned with milk? To the friend from the city such food is uncommon and very pleasing.

Then there is roasted spareribs, not the kind we buy in the markets of the city where every bit of meat possible is shaved off, but those with plenty of tender tasty meat left on them, roasted with stuffing seasoned with the good things which have been raised in the herb and vegetable garden by the housewife herself.

A boiled dinner served from the farm table is as unlike the usual boiled dinner in the city as fresh apples are from the dried. In the first place, the corned beef has been grown, fattened, killed and cured on the place and tastes very different from that prepared in the town market, often from leftover meat or tough portions unsalable. The vegetables are full of good-flavored juices, fresh and tender because of care and proper storing.

A good-sized cabbage, a turnip or two, a few carrots and onions, and a few potatoes with a nice fat piece of corned beef, all cooked together until the vegetables are tender, make a dish fit to set before the dearest friend. It is best to put the corned beef on in simmering water an hour or more before the vegetables are added. Onions and beets are cooked in separate saucepans, then served all together on the platter.

A pork roast of home-grown pork doesn't taste much like the town variety.

With fresh eggs, an omelet, a custard pie or a sponge cake a meal may be quickly prepared which is highly appetizing.

A Few Nice Soups.

A dish of hot soup is always an appetizing food as well as a nourishing one.

Vegetable Soup—Cut fine two onions, a carrot, and three stalks of celery. Fry in a little hot fat, then add a quart of water, a bayleaf, a tablespoonful of powdered sweet herbs, salt and pepper and a teaspoonful of curry powder. Simmer for 20 minutes, strain and add half a cupful of boiled rice.

Lima Bean Soup—Soak over night one cupful of dried lima beans. In the morning drain, cover with six cupfuls of water, add one small onion and half a carrot. Simmer until the vegetables are very soft. Rub through a sieve, reheat, thicken with two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter, thin with a little cold milk and add to the hot soup. Add a cupful of hot rich milk or thin cream and serve at once.

Salsify Soup—Salsify should be well scraped and allowed to stand in cold water, using three bunches. Cut into dice and cook one hour in water to cover. Add one quart of milk, two tablespoonfuls of butter and salt and pepper to season. Bring to the boiling point, add three crackers rolled fine and serve at once.

Curried Soup—Slice one onion, fry in sweet fat, add a sprig of thyme and parsley, a large sour apple, a bay leaf, a tablespoonful of lemon juice, a teaspoonful of salt and the same of curry powder. Add four cupfuls of chicken stock, simmer for 15 minutes, strain and add half a cupful of boiled rice.

Ham and Beef Bone—Cover a ham bone and beef bone with cold water, add a pod of red pepper and two cupfuls of split peas which have soaked over night. Simmer until the peas are soft. Take out the bones, season with salt and pepper if needed and serve.

Split-Pea Soup—Take one cupful of dried split peas, soak over night, drain, add two quarts and a half of water (cold), a two-inch cube of fat salt pork, and one onion. Simmer for three hours and when soft rub through a sieve. Bind with two tablespoonfuls of flour and three of butter, add one pint of milk and cook until smooth, season and serve.

Royal Soup—Soak one cupful of stale bread crumbs in one-half cupful of milk, add the yolks of three hard-cooked eggs rubbed through a sieve, add the breast meat from a chicken, also rubbed through a sieve; then add gradually one and one-half cupfuls of scalded milk, three and one-half cupfuls of chicken stock, season highly and bind with two and one-half tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter cooked together.

Spinach, carrots, salsify and various other soups may be made from vegetables.

Drugs Excite the Kidneys, Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble because we often eat too much rich food. Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Foiling the Scandalmongers

Put it out of the power of any one truly to report you not to be a sincere or a good man; let your practice give the lie; that is all very feasible, for, pray, who can hinder you from being just or sincere? To make all sure, you should resolve to live no longer than you can live honestly; for, in earnest, reason would rather you were nothing than a knave.—Marcus Aurelius.

Paine's Claim to Fame

Thomas Paine was born in 1737 and died in 1809. Of his work called "Common Sense" it is said that it was "the first open assertion of American independence, and was probably the most powerful pamphlet that ever influenced a nation's history." In this sense Thomas Paine may be said to have influenced the preparation and adoption of the Declaration of Independence.
